WE NOMINATE

Julian Parks Boyd, Princeton University's brilliant 44-year old librarian, whose efforts in helping plan the nearly complete $6,000,000 Firestone Library will undoubtedly have immense influence on future library-building in this country. While the new structure's pseudo-Gothic exterior has been well roasted by architects as a stone sop to alumni sentiment, its highly efficient interior—with 60 miles of shelving, a floor area approaching some four and a half acres and a book capacity of nearly 2,000,000 volumes—has escaped criticism and has won acclaim as one of the world's remarkable educational buildings.

Ever since joining the Princeton Faculty in 1940, Boyd, a native of Converse, S. C., has been submerged in library activities. If not active in fund-raising, or bolstering the library's collections or promoting the sound idea that every library must be considered part of the total library economy, he was planning the University's most needed building from the inside out. It was at his suggestion that architects and librarians agreed to work in harness as members of the Cooperative Committee on Library Building Plans, a unique nationwide organization that for the first time promoted the exchange of thoughts and experience between the users and planners of libraries.

Descended on his father's side from five generations of Methodist ministers, Boyd gained recognition as a teacher, editor and historian before actually acquiring the title of librarian. After teaching at both Duke, and at the University of Pennsylvania, he decided to make historical-society work his field. For four years he was affiliated with the Wyoming Historical and Genealogical Society (Wilkes-Barre, Pa.), served as Director of the New York State Historical Association and in 1934 became librarian and editor of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Boyd, who elected to specialize in American history in the 1920's when the academic world was infinitely more concerned with things European, in 1943 was awarded one of the "historical plums" of modern times, the editorship of the complete papers of Thomas Jefferson. This monumental project, sponsored by the University and THE NEW YORK TIMES as a memorial to Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of THE TIMES from 1869 until his death in 1935, will require 20 years to complete and entails editing the 48,000 documents (totaling some 23,000,000 words) which comprise Jefferson's writings and correspondence.

For insisting that any library anywhere has an obligation to the cause of learning everywhere; for relating, as is evidenced in the lead article he wrote for the current issue of THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY, Jefferson's courageous and inspiring defense of individual rights to the dismaying times in which we live; for developing and applying new techniques in the realms of historical reseach and librarianship; he is TOWN TOPICS' nominee for Whodunit. Melodramatic murder, with all its horrible and tragic implications, came to Princeton Wednesday night. Shot and killed: Joseph K. Watkins, of 293 Nassau Street, 54-year old New York business man, as he sat behind the wheel of his car in the driveway of the Princeton Inn. Two bullets at point blank range struck Mr. Watkins near his left eye, causing instantaneous death. He leaves a widow and four children.

Suspect: a former business associate thought to have been in Princeton that evening who owed Mr. Watkins a considerable sum of money because of a suit decided in the latter's favor. Agog: this one "peaceful hamlet" which has now known three fatal shootings (cf. the Hoagland and Harris cases) in a little more than two years.

How to Win $100. Fascinated with the dramatic races in both major baseball leagues and seeking to help the building fund for George M. Durner, Jr., the editors of TOWN TOPICS take pleasure in announcing a contest that should satisfy many a baseball fan and at the same time bring a home for Princeton's only paraplegic a step nearer reality. In a word, ability to name the order in which the first four teams in each league will finish this year will bring the contest winners a total of $175 in prizes, with every cent above that going to the Durner fund.

The rules are simple, the possibilities for gaining a reputation as a prophet of the national pastime are intriguing. There are three prizes ($25, $50 and $100) and the possibility that one contestant whose selections are infallible might win them all. And every entrant, winner or not, will be helping a fellow Princetonian deserving of all the help he can get.

Rarely if ever in the history of baseball have both major leagues been involved in such tight pennant races. Fans everywhere are in hot debate over the chances of the contenders. Will it be the first all-Boston series in history; will the 1920 opponents, Cleveland and Brooklyn, face each other 28 years later, or will another of the familiar New York Yankee-St. Louis Cardinal donnybrooks rank as the 1948 Fall classic?

"Long shot" picking might turn the spotlight on two other teams that have battled each other in the World Series of by-gone years: the Philadelphia Athletics, whose pitching staff has made up for lack of hitting and all-around strength, and the New York Giants, whose tremendous power might be fused by Leo Durocher in a stretch run reminiscent of the days when McGraw was at the helm.

Choosing the other first division teams is no mean trick, either. If the Red Sox are picked to win the American League pennant, how far down the ladder should the Indians go? Will they collapse in the hot September chase, as they have in the past? If the Dodgers complete their astounding trip from last place to first (and hold onto it), will the Cards, Braves and Giants finish in that order? Maybe, but don't forget the Pirates are making the N.L. race a five-team scramble.

News of the Theatres

The Playhouse

The Street With No Name (Fri., Sat.) sends FBI agents out to break up gangsters' rackets in a semi-documentary film that is long on action and good acting. Mark Stevens.

The Velvet Touch (Sun. thru Wed.) casts Rosalind Russell as an actress who loves her producer but murders him when she turns to another man. A crime drama with the stage as a setting develops, slowly and weighted down with dialogue. Sydney Greenstreet.

That Lady in Ermine (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) stars Betty Grable in an operetta about an Italian countess whose domain is beseiged by Hungarians, led by Douglas Fairbanks, who arrives just in time to cancel out her marriage to Cesar Romero. A somewhat silly plot, saved here & there by the singing and dancing.

The Garden

The Best Years of Our Lives (Fri., Sat.), best film of '46, told of returning war veterans' joy and sorrow at becoming civilians again. Fredric March, Myrna Loy, in an epic that begins at 2 & 8 p.m.

Drums (Mon., Tues., Wed.), a 1939 pageant set in northwest India with a strong adventure theme. Raymond Massey, Sabu in a good British production.

Four Faces West (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) tells in western style of a man who robs a bank to help his father out of a hole and of the three people who then help him. Joel McRea, Frances Dee and some good photography.
